

I understand that the animal rights people are interfering with our shipping of animals. I do not think this is proper as I have found over the 40 some years I have been breeding and shipping dogs that they have been perfectly cared for and have not have any bad incidences happen to any of them. If you people change things, we will not be able to attend shows, ship animals back and forth or even travel with our animals. Could you possibly get input from breeders, show people, travellers, kennel operators before listening and following the animal rights peoples way of thinking.

I have seen some of the animal rights people at dog shows who let animals out of their kennel cabs where they are safe, to have them run loose and get hit by cars out on the road, get lost, and they think that is a "humane way to treat animals"?

I hope I have directed my e-mail to the right place. If so, thank you for reading it.
